

BEST IN THE WEST

The New Hospital Building at the University

WILL BE DEDICATED JAN. 20

Bishop Gillespie of This City Will Be Among the Speakers—How the Buildings Will Appear.

ANN ARBOR, Jan. 10.—The formal dedicatory services of the new University hospital will be held on Wednesday, January 20, the exercises taking place under the auspices of the medical faculty of the old school. During the afternoon the building will be thrown open for inspection from 1 o'clock until 5. In the evening exercises will be held in University hall, consisting of an address on "Medical Education," by Dr. A. E. Gibson, of the United States navy, to be followed by short addresses by President J. B. Angell and Mayor W. G. Doty, of this city; Bishop Gillespie, of Grand Rapids; Gov. E. B. Wiman and Judge Draper. Following the meeting the guests will be tendered a reception by the members of the medical faculty and their ladies. The hospital, when completed, will be unequalled in arrangement and design by any in the west, although already the one for the use of the "regular" school has proven inadequate for the accommodation of the large number of patients who come here for treatment. The "regular" building has been completed and is now in running order; the homeopathic building not yet being finished, it will probably not be opened for the reception of patients before the next college year.

How They Are Built.

The buildings are located about half a mile north and east of the campus, on one of the highest hills in the city, affording a fine view of the Huron Valley in both directions. The appropriations made for the erection of the buildings was $75,000, of which the state gave $50,000 and the city of Ann Arbor $25,000, but the present edifice will cost, with the land, in the neighborhood of $100,000, and will then be not more than half large enough to accommodate the increasing number of patients. The buildings are copied after the John Hopkins hospital at Baltimore. It is in the form of a cross, with the front of a circular form. The long south part is occupied by two general wards, that on the first floor being for men and the corresponding one on the second floor for women. Both are already filled. The two wings which form the crosses are out into smaller rooms for offices, private wards, bath rooms, closets, etc. The rounding front of the buildings contains a large amphitheater, capable of seating 470 students. The room is not yet entirely satisfactory, the seating being poor, and the light not good for operations. The entire building is ventilated in a thorough manner, shafts and cross-shafts passing in every direction, insuring perfect ventilation. The building is heated by steam from a boiler house standing a short distance west of it, and it is to be lighted by incandescent electric lights as soon as the wiring is completed. The homeopathic building stands west of the boiler house and is similar in exterior and interior arrangements to the "regular," with the exception of the rounding front which is dispensed with in the homeopathic building.

Ottawa County Endorses It.

The following appears in the proceedings of the board of supervisors of January 7, and refers to the Ottawa County Historical and Business Compendium. "Mr. Kerkhof introduced the following resolution which carried unanimously:

Resolved, That this board has learned with satisfaction of the enterprise in which Messrs. Potts and Conger are engaged, and that we heartily endorse and recommend the work to the people of this county, and that we use our influence individually and as a body, to advance the interests of said work.

SHOT THE ANIMAL.

A Horse Stumbles and Falls and it is Necessary to Kill Him.

A horse from Geo. Inghram's livery barn, No. 320 North Front street, driven by Nick Mulder, ran away on South Division street last night and culminated with a telegraph post at the corner of Oak street, falling it to the ground and injuring its spine so that it was unable to get up. The means of the dumb animal sounded almost human as it lay on the ground. Quite a crowd collected, among which was Ex-Humane Agent Wykes, who requested an officer present to shoot the creature's agony by putting a bullet in its brains. The policeman protested that he did not care to shoot the horse until the owner or some veterinary surgeon decided that it was necessary. Veterinary Surgeons Rose, Campbell and Hunter were summoned. Sergeant Webb was notified and hastening to the spot, concluded upon an examination, to shoot the horse, which he did. It was one of the most valuable horses in Inghram's barn. Mulder states that he is ready to pay all damages.

TRIED TO SNEAK AWAY.

Two Museum Stars Arrested for Jumping a Board Bill.

Professor Victor and Mary Victor have been doing a turn at the museum. During their sojourn in the city they stopped with Landlord Rice at the Bridge street house, some two weeks in all. Saturday night they contemplated leaving the city without first settling for their board, and just as they were about to take a train out of the city they were arrested for attempting to jump a board bill and locked up at headquarters. They will be arraigned in police court this morning unless the professor's friends come forward and help him out of the "soup."

Timing Time at Night.

The time can be approximately told at night by the position of the dipper. If the position of the "pointers" is taken at any given hour, say six o'clock in the evening in winter time and as soon as it is dark in the summer, the hour can thereafter be pretty accurately measured by the eye during the night. Frequent observations of positions will have to be made at the given hour, as, owing to the constant changing of the earth's position in space, the position of the "pointers" in relation to our point of observation and the star also changes.

Netting Phantasms.

One of the most ingenious methods practiced by poachers for the purpose of netting phantasms is that in which a game cock is fitted with artificial spurs and then carried to the presence. Then the game bird crows, one or two more of the cock phantasms immediately respond and advance to fight. In this way sometimes five or six phantasms are taken, while the game cock remains unharmed.

MORE OF HIS ABUSE

A Poor Woman Browbeaten By Mr. Kruse.

WHAT AN OFFICIAL HAS TO SAY

He Thinks That the Poor Director Should Be Set Out in the Cold and a Successor Should Be Appointed.

As proof that Poormaster Kruse's ill-treatment of city charges and applicants for help, is not the exception, one aggravated case is cited this morning. Living at No. 138 Third street is the Aldrick family, consisting of an invalid husband 76 years of age, a broken-down wife 52 years of age, twin boys 15 years old, one girl 12 and one eleven years old. The man is unable to perform any kind of manual labor. The wife is scarcely able to perform the household work, but manages to do a little outside work. The boys sell papers and do odd jobs. The struggle for existence with this family is severe. The complaint is not that the city fails to give them aid, but of the harsh and abusive treatment to which Kruse subjects the poor woman. She is timid and retiring, but necessity forced her to come in contact with him. As orders go, she receives a fair one. The children's feet are shoeless and the mother herself is in the same condition. She called Kruse's attention to the fact and asked him for a pair of shoes to protect her from the biting cold. When she made her request he glared at her, and fairly boiled with rage at her presumption. In language which would cause a savage dog to place its tail between its legs and sneak under some convenient shelter, Kruse thundered his abuse at her. Several persons within hearing distance on one or two such occasions were shocked. The woman's deplorable condition appealed even to the adamant heart of the director and he gave her a pair of shoes.

"He could have done as much without insulting her," said one who overheard his talk, "and I understand that was not the first time he abused this same woman. She wanted shoes for the boys but was afraid to make her wants known."

Not the Proper Person. In conversation with a city official, whose name for the moment is withheld, the gentleman said: "Kruse tries to excuse himself by saying that he talks natural. I know that to be untrue, but if it is the case, he is not the man for the place and should be ousted at once. The city wants a man in that position who is capable of treating these people kindly. If Kruse confesses to being burdened with an insane manner he should resign before the council is called upon to confirm the appointment of his successor. There are many men who would be glad to take the place and put themselves out a little to act decent. I know Kruse well enough to be sure that he looks upon the job as one where he is called upon to exercise authority and do a good work. Well, anyhow, Mr. Aldrick's tender spots are touched when any one suggests that he should do so and so. There was a case I heard of where Mrs. Mosely interceded. The woman had been ill-treated and it came to this lady's notice. Mrs. Mosely and Mrs. Lamoreaux interest themselves a great deal in destitute people and do a good work. Well, anyhow, Mr. Aldrick went to the office to see what she could do. She even went so far as to look at the books, which she had a perfect right to do. Kruse thought she was doing something preposterous and had quite a tilt with her. In addition to the above I understand that each of the hospital matrons have good reason to dislike Kruse on account of trouble which they have had with him. Likewise the charitable homes. I don't know where this matter will end, but I can tell you where I think it ought to end, and that is with the poor director's dismissal."
